

Set Table Lamp

“A common misconception is that making something new requires new materials, technologies, or production processes. In fact, the most interesting ideas come from looking a bit differently at something very familiar. For this project, I chose to explore the screw thread as a tool for modulation. Adjusting the distance between the reflector and the light source not only dims the light, but also changes the radius of light cast. The result is a lamp able to intuitively shift between illuminating small and larger surfaces.”
